Solana Beach: Swell Turns Perfect for American Wave

American Wave Machines Inc. announced May 31 that it developed a new wave generator called PerfectSwell that will be used at resorts and water parks worldwide.

The Solana Beach-based company delivered the first generator to the Aquarium of the Pacific in Long Beach for a yearlong exhibition. PerfectSwell creates oceanlike waves.

American Wave Machines patented SurfStream, the world's first standing wave machine, which is used in water parks, surf parks, resorts and wave-riding exhibitions, in 2006. The 7-year-old company focuses on research and development, of artificial wave technology, according to spokeswoman Valerie Chereskin.
